MOOT PROPOSITION

1. The Republic of Varaj (consisting of 17 States), a federal democratic nation, with a vibrant media landscape and multiparty governance, has a growing economy. Recently, the Republic of Varaj has become the fifth-largest economy and country with the largest population. With technological advancement, the Country boasts of several successful space projects along with a capable defence force. Republic of Varaj is the largest democracy in the world with a ruling government of the same political party for over fifteen years. Surrounded by sea on three sides, the country proves to be a major trading partner in the world economy. The ruling political party, however, has often been referred to as Nationalist, protectionist and nativist, which does not appreciate dissenting opinion. According to a section of the media, the space for civil society groups and the media have been shrinking.
2. It was in the Summer of 2024 (beginning of July), a catastrophic spell of torrential monsoon rains led to unprecedented flooding across multiple districts of the state of Darpur, one of Varaj's most densely populated and politically sensitive states.
3. The torrential rains battered recording an unprecedented 642 mm of rainfall. In just three weeks, over 7,000 villages were submerged, and rivers Nirat and Sahala breached their embankments, displacing more than 1.8 lakh people. Darpur is one of the economically backward states of the country, inhabited by 20 per cent of the tribal population. The Jagdi tribe of the state has often raised their voice against the infrastructural development by the state government. During the flood, the National Disaster Response Force (NDRF), along with units of the Varaj Armed Forces, were mobilised for rescue and relief operations at the direction of the central government. Makeshift bridges were constructed by army engineers across collapsed highways to restore access to cut-off communities. Emergency airdrop of food packets, medical supplies, and clean water was carried out daily by Air Force choppers.
4. The Armed forces were regularly building medical facilities and held a press brief stating that 3,444 medical camps were organised in flood-hit villages. In the medical camps, people suffering from various diseases caused by to flood and otherwise were treated. Seven hundred twenty makeshift bridges were built, along with 9100 boats were arranged to row the stranded victims of the flood to a safe place. Over 45 air force helicopters were employed to provide people with necessities, including food and basic medicines. However, leaked internal audit pages from the CAG's office suggested that nearly 18% of the flood relief fund could not be traced in the expenditure records.
5. The state-run broadcaster VBC aired hourly updates featuring senior bureaucrats and ministers reporting the situation as "under control," while opposition leaders and independent journalists raised alarms about shortages of relief, misallocation of funds, and neglect of marginalised communities.

6. The Chief Minister of Darpur, Rajeev Talan, a key national figure from the ruling Janchetna Party, personally visited several flood-hit areas. While these visits were covered extensively, public anger continued to grow over media reports that some of the flood defence walls collapsed due to alleged corruption in infrastructure contracts, and that medical aid had not reached interior villages even a week after the floodwaters receded.
7. The public mood was, however, volatile, torn between grief, desperation, and simmering distrust toward state mechanisms. Over 300 deaths had been officially recorded by mid-August 2024, and thousands were still missing, prompting citizens to vent their frustration across digital platforms, rallies, and local media.
8. The Central Minister of Disaster Relief further said in a press interview held on November 21, 2024, that "Over 270 Crore rupees were spent in disaster relief by the State government and 5,000 Crore Rupees were spent by centre in rehabilitation and undoing of the disaster of flood."
9. Anvay Kaul, aged 36, is a widely followed political satirist and stand-up comedian, operating under the YouTube channel "Kaulified Satire", with 3.2 million subscribers is known for commentary on governance and public institutions. On December 26, 2024, Kaul uploaded a satirical monologue titled "System Down: The Annual Flood Show", in which he humorously criticised the flood-relief administration of Darpur.
10. The video, running 5 minutes, used fictional characters and reenactments resembling recent press briefings by government officials. The video parodied "flood-relief ministers" and poked fun at "relief packets being airdropped directly into potholes instead of people's homes", statement, "...State of Darpur is too far from the Darkan which is the capital city of Varaj, it seems people of Darpur should shift closer or make a new capital city" was also made. While it included a disclaimer identifying it as satire, several viewers identified it as targeting specific bureaucrats and public figures. The video garnered 6.3M views in 48 hours, with 355 thousand likes, 32 thousand comments, and a 71% retention rate. It was shared over 14 thousand times across major social platforms, amplifying reach. The core audience urban, politically aware 18 to 34-year-olds heightened its potential influence.
11. The video ignited a firestorm. While some praised Kaul for giving voice to public sentiment, others, especially members of the ruling party and state officials, condemned the video as insensitive, politically motivated, and potentially defamatory. On December 30, 2024, protests were organised in 'Excellence University' by students affiliated with the opposition party, in support of Kaul's satirical video. These gatherings, initially peaceful, were met with attempts by ruling party students to disperse them, leading to sporadic clashes on campus. On January 5, 2025, Kaul made a public remark on a digital news platform stating that "It's strange how laughter can sometimes do what decades of speeches could not—perhaps this is just the beginning of Renaissance", which coincided with a marked intensification of unrest, including incidents of property damage, stone pelting, and assaults during a large assembly at Darpur Maidan.

12. The short clippings of the original satirical video quickly went viral, garnering national attention and sparking political backlash; what was earlier confined to the state of Darpur became National. On the evening of January 6, 2025 an FIR was lodged against Kaul in Darpur, by the supports of ruling political party under Section 356, Section 353, Section 152 of VNS and Section 67 of the IT Act, alleging that the video was not only defamatory but it also excited subversive activities, encouraged feelings of separatist activities, and endangered the sovereignty and unity of the Republic of Varaj.
13. On the morning of January 7, 2025, in front of an estimated crowd of 20,000 at Darpur Maidan, a protest organiser declared that Kaul would be joining them later that day. On the evening of January 7, Kaul was arrested by police while travelling within Darpur.
14. Kaul was supported by ex- Advocate General of Varaj, Mr. Gaikwad who was Law Minister in the last government of opposition party. In a press conference by opposition party, Mr. Gaikwad went on to say "The government is showing its true colours, forget not that this FIR is a proof that one cannot dissent with the government. I am sure that no offense is made out under the given sections, rather the provisions are unconstitutional and colonial, which have been used since ages to curb freedom of speech and expression. It is the government which should be held for acting in contravention of its constitutional and legal duties, including those under the Directive Principles of State Policy. I stand behind Kaul, you all should too..."
15. Kaul filed a writ petition under Article 226 before the Darpur High Court, for quashing of the FIR registered in Darpur, and a declaration that his satirical video was protected speech. The Darpur High Court passed an Order, refusing to quash the FIR, stating that the allegations are matter of investigation.
16. Feeling aggrieved by the adverse Order and facing imminent arrest, Kaul has now approached the Hon'ble Supreme Court under SLP.

[NOTE- the laws of Republic of Varaj are pari materia to the laws of India.]

Participants are at liberty to deduce issues from the facts; however, the number of issues shall not exceed four (4).

Transcript

Intro:

"Hello everyone, and welcome back to the channel Kaulified satire ! Life has been quite the adventure recently—monsoon season has arrived, the Wi-Fi has disappeared, and my umbrella might as well be a decorative walking stick. I've been dodging puddles like an Olympic hurdler. Seriously, I think half my cardio this monsoon season comes from avoiding that massive pothole outside my building... you know the one... the one deep enough to have its own postal code."

Segue to Main Topic:

"Speaking of potholes—have you seen those videos of 'flood-relief ministers' diligently working? Truly remarkable footage. Relief packets being air-dropped directly into potholes. Now, I'm not suggesting they were intended for potholes... but perhaps the potholes needed sustenance too? Equal opportunity relief efforts, right? Some might call it satire, others might call it public service—I simply appreciate the impressive accuracy. Perhaps it benefits the people, perhaps it benefits the roads; it's not for me to say. I'm just an observer admiring the efficient targeting."

Closing:

"In any case, the takeaway here is: whether you're a pothole, a person, or a pigeon, monsoon season ensures everyone stays hydrated. Don't forget to like, share, and subscribe before my camera succumbs to water damage—see you next week!"

Breaking News

Darpur has been left reeling after three weeks of unrelenting monsoon rains triggered the worst flooding in the state's history. Over 7,000 villages now lie submerged, with rivers Nira and Sahala breaching their embankments and washing away entire settlements. More than 1.8 lakh residents have been forced from their homes, while official records confirm over 300 deaths and thousands missing.

Rescue operations by the NDRF and Armed Forces have been on a war footing — 9,100 boats deployed, 720 makeshift bridges built, and 45 helicopters conducting daily airdrops of food, medicine, and clean water. Medical teams have treated thousands in 3,444 temporary camps.

BREAKING THE WALLS: CALL FOR UNITED FLOOD RESPONSE IN VARAJ

DARPUR: In the wake of the devastating floods that have submerged large parts of Varaj's capital and neighbouring districts, experts, activists, and citizens alike are calling for the "breaking of walls" — not the literal demolition of homes, but the dismantling of bureaucratic, political, and social barriers that hinder relief.

"This disaster is not the time for isolated action. We need coordination, transparency, and the courage to break down the invisible walls separating institutions from the people they serve," said activist Leena D'Souza.

Breaking News

As Darpur reels from its deadliest floods in decades, serious questions are being raised over the integrity of the state's flood defence infrastructure. Multiple sections of embankments and protective walls along the Nirat and Sahala rivers gave way at the height of the deluge, allowing floodwaters to engulf thousands of homes. Opposition leaders and independent journalists allege that these critical defences were built under inflated contracts awarded to politically connected firms, using substandard materials and poor workmanship. Residents from affected villages report that cracks and leaks had appeared weeks before the rains, but repair requests went unanswered.

While the state government maintains the walls collapsed due to "unprecedented rainfall," leaked documents and whistleblower accounts suggest deep-rooted corruption in project execution. Public outrage is mounting, with calls for a high-level probe to uncover how millions in taxpayer funds could vanish while lives and livelihoods were washed away.

Leaked CAG Report Reveals Missing Flood Relief Funds in Darpur

A confidential audit by the Comptroller and Auditor General (CAG) has cast a shadow over the state's flood relief operations, revealing that nearly 18% of the allocated funds cannot be traced in official expenditure records. The report, leaked to independent media outlets by unidentified but reliable internal sources, points to glaring discrepancies in procurement bills, inflated transport costs, and incomplete documentation for critical supplies.

According to the leak, several large contracts for rescue equipment, food packets, and temporary shelters were awarded without proper bidding, raising fears of widespread misappropriation. In some cases, relief materials were either delivered late, in insufficient quantities, or not at all — even as thousands of stranded families waited for aid.

The state government has dismissed the leak as "politically motivated," but opposition leaders have demanded a judicial inquiry, accusing ruling party officials of siphoning off funds meant for flood victims. For the people of Darpur, still struggling to rebuild their lives, the revelations deepen a growing distrust in the institutions meant to protect them.

SATIRE OR SEDITION? POLITICAL COMEDIAN'S FLOOD VIDEO SPARKS FIRESTORM

Darpur: Political satirist and YouTuber Anvay Kaul has landed in legal trouble after releasing a controversial video mocking the state government's flood relief efforts. The five-minute clip, System Down: The Annual Flood Show, portrayed fictional bureaucrats making bizarre suggestions — including one advising flood victims to “move closer to the capital city” if they wanted quicker aid.

“This is not just about one YouTuber,” said activist Meera Das. “This is about whether citizens can criticise their leaders without fear.”

Opposition parties have accused the administration of silencing dissent.

The video has racked up over 6 million views in just two days, splitting public opinion. Supporters hail Kaul as a bold voice against government apathy, while ruling party members call the video “insensitive” and “provocative.” Three FIRs have now been lodged

TIMES IN DARPUR

They were supposed to be the city's last line of defence. Instead, they crumbled like sandcastles in the rain. As monsoon-fed rivers Nirat and Sahala roared through Darpur last month, several sections of the much-touted flood defence walls collapsed in minutes, unleashing torrents that swallowed homes, fields, and entire streets.

In the aftermath, a darker story began to surface. Villagers recall seeing cracks in the embankments weeks before the flood, some patched with what they describe as “mud and paint” instead of reinforced concrete. Opposition leaders and independent reporters allege that lucrative contracts for the walls were awarded to politically connected firms at inflated rates, with cheaper, substandard materials replacing those specified in the tender. Whistleblowers within the Public Works Department claim inspection reports warning of structural weakness were ignored to avoid delaying payments.

The state government insists the destruction was the result of “unprecedented rainfall,” but public outrage is boiling over. Markets buzz with talk of “walls built to fall,” and social media is awash with before-and-after photos of the collapsed defences. Calls for a full judicial probe are growing louder, as many in Darpur demand to know whether the disaster was a natural calamity — or a man-made betrayal.

Kaul's Arrest Raises Questions Over Freedom of Speech in Varaj

By- Ritu

The arrest of political satirist Anvay Kaul has intensified a nationwide debate on whether freedom of speech in the Republic of Varaj is under threat. Kaul was taken into custody on February 7, days after uploading a five-minute satirical video, "System Down: The Annual Flood Show", which mocked the state's flood relief administration through fictional characters and parody of official press briefings.

While the video carried a disclaimer identifying it as satire, members of the ruling party alleged it was defamatory and incited public disorder, leading to an FIR under multiple penal provisions. Supporters argue that the charges are disproportionate and politically motivated, pointing to a pattern of legal action against voices critical of the government.

Kaul's detention — combined with past instances of journalists, activists, and comedians facing similar crackdowns — has fuelled public perception that the space for dissent is shrinking. For many observers, the incident is yet another sign that the promise of free expression, enshrined in the Constitution, is increasingly constrained by the machinery of the state.

In Defence of Satire: Why Kaul's Arrest Should Alarm Us All

By- Rohan

The arrest of political satirist Anvay Kaul in Darpur last week has ignited a storm over the state of free expression in the Republic of Varaj. Kaul, whose five-minute video, "System Down: The Annual Flood Show" satirised the state government's flood relief efforts, now faces multiple criminal charges, including defamation and incitement.

Having viewed the video in its entirety, it is difficult to reconcile the state's claims with the work itself. Kaul's piece, while biting in its humour, relied on fictional characters, carried a clear satire disclaimer, and reflected a frustration that many citizens openly share. It was not a call to violence but a commentary — the very function satire has served in democracies for centuries.

What is most troubling is not only the disproportionate legal response but the chilling effect such actions can have on other commentators, comedians, and journalists. A democracy grows stronger when its leaders can withstand scrutiny and even ridicule. By targeting Kaul, the state risks sending a message that dissent — even when expressed through art and humour — is intolerable. In defending Kaul, we defend not just one individual, but the principle that criticism is not a crime.

Silencing Laughter: The Dangerous Message Behind Kaul's Arrest

By- Mahima

In the Republic of Varaj, it now seems a joke can land you behind bars. The arrest of political satirist Anvay Kaul over his viral video "System Down: The Annual Flood Show" should alarm every citizen who values the right to speak freely. His crime? Using humour to question the state's handling of the 2024 Darpur floods – a tragedy that left over 300 dead and more than 1.8 lakh displaced.

Satire is not sedition. Yet, the state's reaction has blurred that line, weaponising criminal law to punish not just Kaul's words, but the very act of dissent. A government confident in its record would counter criticism with facts, not police action. Instead, Kaul's detention sends a clear signal: step out of line, and you will be silenced.

This is bigger than one comedian. It is about whether we, as a nation, still have the courage to hear uncomfortable truths – even when they come wrapped in laughter. If we allow a government to criminalise satire today, what stops it from criminalising any opinion tomorrow? Democracies die not with a bang, but with the quiet erosion of freedoms we fail to defend.
